Brand New Book  Print on Demand .The nation is rocked to its very core following a civil war as the highest court in the land considers whether the United States Constitution is the organic law of the country, or a complete sham. Can Republican Radicals who have taken over the legislative and executive branches of the government; removed a sitting President; and enacted an amendment to the Constitution which allows for the enslavement of former slave owners perpetrate one of the most horrendous injustices upon the nation ever attempted by any government, or will a backwoods lawyer from the former confederate state of Tennessee be their undoing? This is the question which faces eight members of the United States Supreme Court. This is a story about a Southern lawyer-plantation- owner and a Northern educator- abolitionist who cross paths during the chaos of civil war and discover the meaning of true love and respect as they battle the forces of hate, ignorance and intolerance emanating from the highest levels of the national government. Henry O Day, a lawyer-planter widower with a teen aged daughter, owns a small plantation on the Cumberland Plateau in Tennessee in 1860. He secretly is a part of the Underground Railroad, sending runaway slaves north. While he is on a journey to Jackson, Mississippi to rescue a slave woman (the wife of one of the Negroes on his plantation) who has been taken from Crossville, Tennessee to be sold, Republican radicals in Congress are planning to pass punitive legislation which will insure that plantation owners who continued to keep slaves after President Lincoln announced the Emancipation Proclamation will have their lands confiscated and given to their former slaves. In...
