University of Nebraska Press. Paperback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, The Allegany Senecas and Kinzua Dam: Forced Relocation through Two Generations, Joy Ann Bilharz, In the late 1950s, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers announced its intention to construct a dam along the Allegheny River in Warren, Pennsylvania. The building of the Kinzua Dam was highly controversial because it flooded one-third of the Allegany Reservation of the Seneca Nation of Indians. Nearly six hundred Senecas were forced to abandon their homes and relocate, despite a 1794 treaty that had guaranteed them those lands in perpetuity. In this revealing study, Joy A. Bilharz examines the short- and long-term consequences of the relocation of the Senecas. Granted unparalleled access to members of the Seneca Nation and reservation records, Bilharz traces the psychological, economic, cultural, and social effects over two generations. The loss of homes and tribal lands was heartwrenching and initially threatened to undermine the foundations of social life and subsistence economy for the Senecas. Over time, however, many Senecas have managed to adapt successfully to relocation, creating new social networks, invigorating their educational system, and becoming more politically involved on local, tribal, and national levels. Today the Kinzua Dam is, according...

This ebook is very gripping and intriguing. I have read through it and I am confident that I will read it again and again down the road. It has been written in an extremely straightforward way and it is merely right after I finished reading this book through which it actually altered me, altered the way I really believe.
