Arcadia Publishing, 2010. Book Condition: New. Brand New, Unread Copy in Perfect Condition. A+ Customer Service! Summary: Title: New book tells the story of Egg Harbor's past in pictures Author: Claire Lowe Publisher: Shore News Today Date: 3/10/2010 Egg Harbor City Historical Society President Mark Maxwell has always had a love of history. Most recently, he turned that love into a book about Egg Harbor City's heritage using more than 200 pictures from the Roundhouse Museum and local contributors. "From when we were kids, my mother, being a fourth-grade teacher, would take us all over New Jersey. Of course at that age, it's fun to run up and down the hills at Valley Forge, but you didn't realize you were getting history thrown at you," Maxwell said. He became involved in the Historical Society at the age of 48, when he says his mother tricked him into joining. "She was one of the founding members of the Historical Society," he explained. In 1995, Maxwell's mother asked him to accompany her to a presentation by the society on Amatol, the site of a World War I-era explosives factory and surrounding town where there former New Jersey State Police barracks stands in Hammonton. He enjoyed himself, so he attended the next meeting. "That's when I found out that I was up for vice president," Maxwell said. He had been working at the Roundhouse Museum, the home of the Historical Society, for more than 10 years when he came across Arcadia Publishing, which had published history books on many of the city's neighboring towns. In October 2008, Maxwell received an email from Erin Rocha of Arcadia asking if he were interested in putting together a book for Egg Harbor City. "I had no idea what I was getting myself into," he said. "It...
