The story goes that, as they were driving home in the family coach one evening in 1756, they talked of Flodden, and Gilbert wagered a pair of gloves or a set of ribbons against his sister's chances as a writer of a successful ballad on the subject. After this there was silence, and by the time the journey was ended the rough draft of the song was ready. When presently it was published anonymously, and with the most sacred silence on the part of the writer herself and of her friends as to authorship, it won instant success. Readers were at first inclined to believe that Miss Elliott's Flowers of the Forest was a genuine relic of the past suddenly and in some miraculous way restored in its perfection. Nor is this to be wondered...
