Not illustrated. 1920 Excerpt: .be balanced by using the amount of the Cash Dr. and Cash Cr. columns only. To prove cash, at any time, take the difference between these two columns. The cash book illustrated is shown without the pages in the folio column. These should be inserted as each item is posted. The Journal. Separate columns must be kept in the journal for each ledger to which items will be debited or credited. On the debit side, there must be columns for the general ledger and for the purchase ledger. No debit column for the sales ledger is necessary as the business does not give notes or drafts to customers on account, hence there will ordinarily be no debits to the sales ledger from the journal. On the credit side, there must be columns for the general ledger and for the sales ledger. No credit column for the...
